Mr. Nahan Franko, who recovered a judgment for salary from George W. Lederer in the Seventh District Court, is indignant at Mr. Lederer's published statement that he, Franko, might be an ordinary first violin player, but was Workingmen Decide Not to Take not fitted for a conductor.

Mr. Franko says Lederer thought enough of his abilities to engage him as conductor and that he would still be with Lederer but for the latter's desire to cut down expenses.

In support of this Mr. Franko shows a letter written by Lederer in which he

For large and other reasons the section adopted the motion to take no part in the demonstration.

With one or two exceptions the delegates expressed themselves in favor of more liberal Sunday laws, but they were decidedly opposed to the men who are at the head of the present movement, and declared that it would be the height of knoonsistency with trades unionism to meet in Sulzer's Fark, because the proprietor thereof had opposed organized labor for years and employed non-union help and sold non-union beer and cigars and other articles.

Instances were cited where the walking delegates were driven out of saloons in course of construction by the owners and non-union mechanics employed to fit them up.
